Conclusion # 1

This paper discussed the first concentration camp, pressuring of the Jews, and Auschwitz. We remember these events in hope that it never happens again. Though some still deny the Holocaust, it is important to remember approximately 6 million Jews lost their lives. If we fail to remember, it could open the door for a future Holocaust. We remember so that such a terrible nightmare never happens again. believed her voices were from God. On May 30th, 1431 Joan wore a dress dipped in sulfur so that it would burn fast and a dunce’s cap labeled heretic and witch. More than ten thousand people gathered in the marketplace to watch her die. They were all silent as she was being tied to the stake. A kind English soldier gave her a cross made from two sticks which she tucked in her dress. The fire was lit, the flame spread upward, and hid her from the crowd. She was heard crying in agony, “Jesus, Jesus!” Then there was a silence. At only age nineteen, Joan’s life came to an end.

This paper discussed Joan of Arc’s visitations of voices, her meeting the Dauphin, how she was captured, trialed, and killed. Five years after Joan’s death, the French army freed Paris from the English.
Within twenty-five years the French had gained back all of their land except for two cities, Bordeaux and Calais. It wasn’t until hundreds of years later that she was recognized as a saint. In that same year, 1920, the day of her death became a national holiday. Joan will always be a hero to the people of France.
